excerpt from the adventures of gerard the lion killer comprising a history of his ten years campaign among the wild animals of northern africa the usual number of habitues and loungers were sitting within talking and laughing together and a man was standing opposite the target with rifle in hand ready to take his shot as i joined the group standing near him he brought his rifle to his shoulder and hardly had the barrel attained its level before the piece was discharged and the marker down at the other end of the gallery called out mouche the centre at the same time marking the bullet hole with a white wand there was something so quick and decided in the motions of the man and as i fancied something of the air of the mississippi scout in his posture that i crossed over to the other side of the gallery to see his countenance a heavy black beard and moustache trimmed to a point concealed the lower part of a bronzed visage the turban of the spahi uniform shaded his forehead his face was thin and almost the only uncovered feature of his countenance by which the spectator might judge the character of the man was the eye this was dark and remarkably piercing seeming to concentrate heat and light like a lens and yet was not quick withal but on the contrary calm and slow in its movements before my observations were finished the attendant handed to the marksman another rifle dropping his right foot a step behind he raised the gun quickly as before a scarcely discernible instant of pause and the report rang on the car while from the other end of the gallery came back the marker s call mariee another shot and another and always the same result until a dozen shots had been fired and a dozen bullets had been married or piled as the more literal saxon would render it in the centre of the target the marksman then bowed politely to the group of gentlemen standing by and passed out of the gallery the buzz of conversation that had been hushed was renewed and turning to one of the attendants i asked about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to
